"I never saw such a heroic and game of fort to rally in my life as that of Johnson's last Monday night," said Prof. Mike Donovan yesterday. "I see, however, that Johnson's judgment of distance is called very poor. I think his poor work in that regard due more to Dixon's marvellous judgment of time and distance than to his own fault. Dixon measures distance like the old-timers used to, and has a wonderful combination of any of them, but he felt his interiority with Dixon after the first round."
